1 Review Procedure

The reviews were single-blind, and each submission was examined by 2 reviewer(s) independently.

The organizer distributed the submitted papers to the respective reviewers through email separately after firstly being screened for their scope and generic suitability. The papers were then being handed over to each reviewer in accordance with the respective expertise by considering any competing interests at most. The reviewer then gave the revision notes and recommendation upon the respective papers. Editors delivered the revision notes to the authors for revision. The author the submitted the revised papers to the editors.

The revised papers were then taken back to the reviewers for final approval. A paper could only be considered for acceptance if it had received final approval from the reviewers as it met the revision notes and suggestions from the reviewers.
