1. INTRODUCTION

Literary works are a representation or reflection of society (Emzir and Rohman, 2015:254). Literary works tell various problems of human life in their interactions with the environment, their interactions with themselves, and their interactions with God. Literary works are the result of dialogue, contemplation and the author's reaction to the environment and life. Literary works are born from intense appreciation and contemplation, contemplation of the nature of life and life, contemplation carried out with full awareness and responsibility.

Literary works are a reflection or reflection of an individual's social relationships with other individuals, or between individuals and society. Literature is created to be enjoyed, understood and utilized by society. Literary works can contain ideas that may be used to foster certain social characteristics, or even to trigger certain social events.

According to Istiqomah (2014), literary works are essentially the embodiment of life, the result of the writer's experience of the life around him. Authors create literary works based on the experiences they have gained from the realities of life in society which occur in the roles of characters in the real world and express them in the form of literary works.

Furthermore, according to Damono (2013), literary works do not just fall from the sky, but there is always a relationship between writers, literature and society. Therefore, understanding literary works must always place them in a frame that is inseparable from these various variables: the author as a member of society, the socio-cultural, political and economic conditions that play a role in giving birth to literary works, as well as the readers who will read, enjoy, and utilize these literary works.

Literature is considered as a socio-cultural phenomenon, as a product of society. Authors, as creators of literary works, are members of society. In creating literary works, of course he cannot be separated from the society in which he lives, so that what is depicted in literary works is often a representation of the reality that occurs in society. Likewise, readers who enjoy literary works. Readers are also members of society, with a number of socio-cultural, political and psychological aspects and backgrounds that influence their choice of reading and interpreting the work they read. Starting from this, from the perspective of literary sociology, literary works, among other things, can be seen as products of society, as a means of re-representing (representing) reality in society. Literature can also be a document of socio-cultural and political realities that occurred in society at a certain time.

One of the social realities that is often highlighted in a literary work is the social reality of violence. Violence is one of the social problems that often occurs in Indonesia, violence in a literary work often reflects cases of violence that occur in real life, therefore, by analyzing violence in a literary work, it can provide an overview of the social reality that exists in society, several writers were inspired by cases of violence in real life and put it into a literary work, a type of literary work that often reflects elements of violence based on social realities that occur in people's lives.

One form of literary work is a novel. A novel is a work of fiction that offers a world, a world that contains an idealized model of life, an imaginary world that is built through various intrinsic elements. Such as events, plots, characters, points of view and so on, all of which are imaginary (Nurgiayanto, 2014:14). The unique characteristic of novels is their ability to create a universe that is both complete and complicated. Novels express something freely, present something more, in more detail.

One of the novels that describes violence is the novel "Perempuan yang Menangis Kepada Bulan Hitam" by Dian Purnomo. This novel was chosen because the strength of the novel lies in the closeness of the story to the reality of Indonesian history and culture. The novel "Perempuan yang Menangis Kepada Bulan Hitam" by Dian Purnomo tells the story of the custom of kidnapping or captive marriage in the Sumba area. Dian Purnomo voices the screams of women survivors of captive marriages, stirring readers' feelings and opening our eyes that gender injustice and violence against women still exist and are real. The novel "Perempuan yang Menangis Kepada Bulan Hitam" by Dian Purnomo is a reminder not to remain silent about crimes against women.

According to Galtung & Fischer (2013: 35) violence is any insult that can be avoided, but in the end is left alone, so that it is difficult for a person to actualize himself properly. Violence is the deprivation of a person's right to life, violence can take the form of injuring and harming the body, mind and soul. Johan Galtung's concept of violence includes direct violence, structural violence and cultural violence. Direct violence is a form of violence that can be clearly seen by the perpetrator; Structural violence is a form of violence that hurts basic human needs, but no direct perpetrator can be held accountable; while cultural violence is a form of violence that targets the beliefs of a person or group of people.

Johan Galtung's concept of violence was chosen to study the novel The novel "Perempuan yang Menangis Kepada Bulan Hitam" by Dian Purnomo because it was considered comprehensive enough to see all forms of violence that occurred in the novel. Regardless of whether or not this kind of research has ever been the object of other researchers, it is considered that the problem is still hot and interesting enough to be researched. Research on violence in novels has been carried out by previous researchers. However, based on the author's observations, there has been no research that has studied these two novels.

There are several studies that are relevant to this research, including Anisya (2023) entitled Violence in the Novel Siri' by Asmayani Kusrini: Perspective on Johan Galtung's Theory of Violence. The results of this research show that first, the most dominant form of violence in this research is direct violence, direct violence is divided into two types, namely non-physical and physical direct violence, direct violence is dominant in the main character, the main character receives a lot of treatment. worse than other characters. Second, the research results also show that there are three types of structural violence obtained, namely the types of structural violence in the form of passive/omission violence, repressive violence and alienative violence. Third, some data also shows that there is cultural violence found in the novels analyzed, including early matchmaking, discrimination against the Islamic religion, women in education, village community beliefs and tribalism.

The next relevant research was carried out by Nur Laily, et al (2022: 12-28) in a journal he wrote entitled Violence Against Female Characters in the Novel Prasetyane Wanita by Tulus Setiyadi Feminism Studies. In this research, qualitative research methods were used, the data source used was the novel Prasetyane Wanita by Tulus Setiyadi. The data collection technique is in the form of literature study which consists of reading techniques and note-taking techniques. The data analysis techniques used are data reduction, data display and data verification. The results of this research show that there are four forms of violence against female characters in the novel Prasetyane Wanita by Tulus Setiyadi. Violence against female characters includes psychological violence against women, physical violence against women, sexual violence against women and economic violence against women. The difference between this research and this research is that apart from the data source used, it also lies in the focus of the research study. This research uses feminist studies in analyzing the data, whereas in this research it uses Johan Galtung's violence studies.

Violence Structural Violence

Structural violence is a form of violence that hurts basic human needs, but no direct perpetrator can be held responsible. Structural violence does not involve a direct relationship between the victim and the perpetrator of violence and originates from the social order. Structural violence is a form of indirect and systemic violence, which is rooted in the social, economic and political structure of a society. This form of violence is not always visible to the naked eye, but it has a serious impact on the lives of marginalized individuals and groups. Structural violence creates inequality and injustice in the distribution of society's resources, opportunities and rights. Structural violence occurs built-in (in the structure), it was found that there are three types of structural violence, namely types of structural violence in the form of passive violence, repressive violence and alienative violence. However, in the novel there is no form of alienative violence.

a) Violence Passive

Violence structural type violence passive, deep context This, refers to violence structural where the indPassive type of structural violence, in this context, refers to structural violence in which certain individuals or groups experience inequality in access to resources, opportunities and their basic rights without any physical or direct action involved. The novel describes how Leba Ali’s connections were at the police station. He could easily bribe the police so that he would not be arrested even though he had been proven to have kidnapped and raped Magi Diela. Magi did not get justice, even though she was a rape victim. This is explained in the following data excerpt:

(60). Unfortunately, Leba Ali is also quite respected in West Sumba. He is one of the campaigners who is quite influential for the currently elected Regent. His claws are everywhere, including at the police station where he was reported and summoned at this time (Page 83).

(61). In the evening Leba Ali was allowed to go home and was prohibited from going out of town while the investigation was ongoing. The statement that he had made an agreement with Magi Diela's family was enough to convince the police (Page 83).

(62). Leba Ali does not detained because the connection with insiders (page 83).

b) Violence Repressive

Repressive type of structural violence is any treatment carried out by depriving a person of their fundamental rights/basic rights, such as freedom of opinion, social equality, gender, protection of personal property and social property rights, citizenship and political rights. Repressive violence is seen in the novel. The marriage custom has robbed Magi Diela of her right to live happily with the man she loves. Magi Diela was not given the opportunity to express her feelings regarding the agreement between Leba Ali and Ama Bobo. The following is a quote from the data in the novel:

(63). Initially Magi suspected that Leba Ali was the only one at fault, but it slowly disappeared. Magi suspects that her father is also behind this forced marriage attempt. Almost all the stories Magi heard about captive mating were always the same. There was an agreement between the kidnapper's family and the woman's family, without involving the woman herself. Her father, the person Magi had always thought was different from her friends' fathers, turned out to be the same. Magi couldn't imagine how many animals would become the belis promised by Leba Ali. Even with a thousand animals, Magi still felt angry and humiliated. And what made Magi angry the most was because Magi was helpless, unable to face her father to ask him the truth of her suspicions. Magi didn't even dare to imagine the moment her father found out she had been raped. Somehow, Magi was sure that this would only make her father more determined to continue this marriage (page 63).

Furthermore, injustice/inequality is a type of repressive violence, which can hurt someone psychologically. In the novel there is injustice experienced by Magi Diela. The tradition of abducted marriages in West Sumba has shackled Magi Diela. With the help of 5 young men, Leba Ali managed to kidnap Magi Diela while on her way to Hupu Mada village. At that time, Magi Diela was tasked with providing agricultural counseling to farmer groups in West Sumba, specifically Hupu Mada Village. Magi Diela was harassed by the five young men. There is no customary discussion that does not agree on the number of belis. No one had ever fallen in love with her so much that they were so hurt that they felt compelled to take her by force to be their wife. Magi Diela was not given the opportunity... to speak out, reject all forms of injustice and oppression that she experienced. This is described in the following data excerpt:

(64). Some say that kidnapping marriage can also be a solution if the man's family fails to reach a traditional agreement with the woman's family. If this is the cause, then the woman's family may not have known about the plan beforehand. After the prospective bride was kidnapped, the woman's family surrendered and finally a traditional agreement was reached. (Page 19).

(65). Haltingly, Rega told of Magi's attempt to commit suicide after hearing the news that Ama Bobo had finally accepted the proposal and offer of buying and selling made by the wunang (spokesperson) sent by Leba Ali's family. (Page 32).

(66). With the last of her strength, Magi sat up and cried. Cry out loud. Even if no one will help him, Magi will leave a crying sound that will haunt anyone who hears Magi. Until the grave, Magi prayed that they would never forget how the sound of her cries today cut through the horizon (Page 57).

(67). Magi felt like she was being played by her own father. Now he's questioning all the negotiations he's done since he's been at Soe. Magi even thought that her father was involved in the attempt to kidnap her almost four years ago. (Page 242).

(68). This is all part of the plan. Ama Bobo's illness is a shortcut for Magi to return to her father's chosen destiny, marrying the bastard Leba Ali. At that moment, the feeling of love, pity and pity for her father disappeared. Magi stared at her father sharply, but Ama Bobo directed his eyes to the kaleku, choosing the betel fruit she was going to chew. (Page 243).

(69). Why are our ancestors so cruel to me, Dangu?" Magi brushed her nose. "Why do they let the women who gave birth to them suffer for the rest of their lives? How many women live this tradition like me?" (Page 251).

(70). Magi shook her head. "I will face everything. "If not now, maybe next it will be Manu's turn to be treated like this, or who knows who else later," said Magi right in Dangu's ear. (Page 262).

(71). "Twice I escaped death but my ancestors kept making me cry. How long will I and other women in Sumba, my homeland, continue to cry? " (Page 312)

Violence Cultural (Cultural Violence)

Violence cultural is form violence targeting beliefs, somebody or something group society that is no direct can harm someone, violence cultural nature symbolic which includes religion, ideology, language, art, formal science, as well cosmology (culture) (Galtung, 1996: 31). Violence cultural appear as consequence from attitudes, values, feelings, ways life, ethnicity (ethnicity), habits, beliefs and ideology used for trigger and justify appearance violence.

1) Arranged marriage

One type violence the culture being told in the novel, namely form matchmaking takes place family Leba Ali with Ama Bobo, against Magi Diela. As depicted in quote the following data:

(72). "I don't know if I can survive with the person who raped me. I do not know. I would love to kill him, but it would be too easy for him. I want him to live in pain. I don't want to go to jail because of him. I don't want to get my hands dirty and smell like blood because of him." (Page 250).

(73). "Why are our ancestors so cruel to me, Dangu?" Magi brushed her nose. "Why do they let the women who gave birth to them live? How many women live this tradition like me?" (Page 251).

An arranged marriage also took place between Maria Kadudonga and Dangu. Dangu doesn't dislike Maria. For Dangu, marrying Maria was not something that had ever crossed his wildest dreams. Pulling a woman into his life by force, just to save a good name that should not be tarnished, is a ridiculous act. This is no different from forcibly kidnapping a woman and marrying her. Dangu also tried to negotiate with Maria so that she would refuse the arranged marriage. Maria was very lucky to respond positively because she was actually close to someone, this can be seen in the following quote:

(74). She will be Dangu's future wife. They didn't know each other, but this was all too fast for both of them (page 90).

2) Women in Education

Basically, men and women have the same position, but in some places, sometimes a man's status is higher than that of a woman, as told in the novel, Manu, a Sumbanese woman, was not given the freedom by her father to pursue higher education. Ama Bobo did not allow Manu (Magi Diela's younger brother) to continue studying. The following is an excerpt of the data:

(75). Manu says that their father no will sent Manu to school. Let Manu will do it guard counter cellphone or So convenience store keeper there is , the only one in Waikabubak, which is important so There is partner direct mated (page 196).

(76). Deep down, Magi knew she wanted to get married, but not now and not under these circumstances. Magi wants the knowledge he gained at college to be useful. Magi wants to be an independent woman, so if she has to get married, Magi wants to be with a man who doesn't restrain her. Magi still wants to work, create. Magi can't stay still, spending time taking care of the house. (Page 242).
Data quote (76) explains that highly educated women do not want to be restrained by men. Women must be equal to men. Women must be able to live independently, work and continue to create. Women should not be silent, spending time taking care of the house.

3) Village Community Trust
Village community always own each other's beliefs since first, no seldom a number of belief that is held make somebody even some people experience loss, as it seems in quote the following data:

(77). Dangu will forever be accused of being a man without knowledge of customs who intends to marry a woman from his own tribe. There is nothing more despicable than intermarriage. This is like marrying your own mother or father. Disgusting. Just imagine Dangu shuddering (page 27).

This quote explains that people in West Sumba understand that marriages within the same tribe should not take place. Magi Diela and Dangu are from the Weetawar kabisu (tribe). Next is the following data:

(78). Without realizing it, Ama Nano shouted his child's name, "Dangu Toda!" All the hunters suddenly stopped. A ban has been violated, someone has been hurt. Even though the female boar finally collapsed, not far from where they were huddled and the men immediately tried to stop Dangu's bleeding, the boar was no longer the main concern of the hunters. The sky is still not completely blue, parts of it are still gray. They immediately carried Dangu out of the forest to take him to the nearest health center. Whispers were immediately heard that this accident was a curse because Dangu had violated the prohibition. Fellow Kabisu must not unite! Love among fellow tribesmen is the greatest pamali in their customs (Page 97)

The quote (78) describes the beliefs of the Sumbanese people. The people of Sumba believe that the forest is a hiding place for evil spirits. They can easily disguise themselves as humans and cause harm if residents violate existing rules. To prevent evil spirits in the forest from harming hunters and wood seekers, the Sumba people even have a special language that is only used in the forest. Rice, water, eating, all have different languages. The people of West Sumba have three languages that must be learned, namely everyday language, traditional language and forest language. Trading any of these is a big ban.

In the forest, hunters are also not allowed to call other people by name. Divulging someone's name is the same as telling an evil forest spirit so that he can disguise himself as that person. In the forest everyone loses their human identity. They all call each other "Oo'o". Whoever hears someone shouting that word, responds with the same exclamation. The direction the sound comes from determines which village the caller is in. In this way, they hope to trick the evil spirit of the forest so that they are confused about who they are impersonating.

(79). Going into the forest, one must also be in a clean state of mind. If there is just one person who is confused, angry, has dirty thoughts, or other negative things, then it is certain that an accident or other undesirable thing will occur during the hunt. (page 95).

4) Exogamy
Exogamy is a social rule where marriage is only permitted outside a social group, both parties or one of the married parties does not merge with their partner's relatives. These social groups define the scope and establishment of exogamy, and the rules and mechanisms that are enforced are ongoing. Cultural exogamy is marriage outside a specific cultural group; In contrast, the novel describes cultural exogamy, where members of the Weetawar kabisu (tribe) are not allowed to marry. These customary rules clearly shackle the community. One of them is Magi Diela and Dangu. They have been friends since childhood, but over time the seeds of love grew between them. However, their love must be tempered because tradition does not allow this love to end happily. Both must suffer. This is outlined in the following quote:

(79). Dangu's entire body was tense with anger and pain. He regretted and cursed all his ancestors for giving birth to him from the same tribe as the Magi. The only thing that prevents Dangu from helping Magi is their similar ethnicity. If he had come from a different tribe, Dangu would have proposed to Magi. He didn't care whether they would be a good husband and wife couple or not, what was clear was that he knew he would never hurt Magi. (Page 250).

(80). "Why are our ancestors so cruel towards me, Dangu?" Magi brushed her nose. "Why do they let the women who have given birth to them all their lives suffer from being confined by custom? How many women live the tradition like me?" (Page 251).

(81). In his tears, Dangu cursed customs. Just because he was born from the same kabisu, he would never be able to save Magi from the cruelty of this forced marriage. Even if he tries to die, he will not succeed in becoming a man who can completely protect Magi Diela. Especially after Magi was taken to Patakaju later. Like a kite breaking its string, his friendship with Magi Diela was over (Page 264).

4. DISCUSSION OF RESEARCH
The novel "Perempuan yang Menangis kepada Bulan Hitam" by Dian Purnomo is a novel that tells the story of the tradition of abducted or captured marriages in the Sumba area. Based on the perspective of Johan Galtung's theory of violence, several forms of violence experienced by Magi Diela were found in the novel. According to Galtung & Fischer (2013: 35) violence is any insult that can be avoided, but in the end is left alone, so that it is difficult for a person to actualize himself properly. Violence is the deprivation of a person's right to life, violence can take the form of injuring and harming the body, mind and soul. A threat is also an act of violence, as an insult to the mind and soul, creating distortion and despair through fear. The object or perpetrator of violence is every bearer of life, especially an individual or collective (group, state) human (actor). Violence can not only be perpetrated by one person against another, but violence can also be perpetrated by structures, by social institutions and also by culture, targeting the physical and mental.

Based on the research objective, namely to explore the forms of violence in the novel "Perempuan yang Menangis kepada Bulan Hitam" by Dian Purnomo, this research focuses on analyzing the forms of violence in the novel through the perspective of Johan Galtung's theory of violence. Based on the results of data analysis, the forms of violence in this study were dominated by direct violence, namely 15 forms from 59 data, including threatening (12 data), insulting (8 data), accusing (1 data), ridiculing (2 data), harassing (3 data), forcing (2), selfish attitude (6 data), strangling (2 data), crushing (3 data), dragging (2 data), slapping (3 data), pulling hair (2 data), biting (1 data), punching (4 data), and raping (6 data). Direct violence is described in the form of non-physical violence and direct physical violence. Direct non-physical violence has injured Magi Diela and Dangu without touching and without causing direct injury, but can have an impact on the characters' psychology, causing long-term effects such as trauma and other mental health problems. Direct non-physical violence can be more damaging than physical violence. Meanwhile, direct physical violence involves the use of physical force and was directly carried out by Leba Ali, which left scars on Magi Diela's body. Physical violence occurs due to uncontrolled emotions, the inability to manage emotions well causes acts of violence that can harm a person, this is in line with research conducted by Rahmawati, et al (2022: 1274) that direct physical violence still continues to occur in society. due to uncontrolled emotions which result in injury and even death to the victim. Death greeted Magi Diela several times.

Furthermore, based on the results of data analysis, there are 2 forms of structural violence in the novels analyzed, namely passive violence (3 data) and repressive violence (9 data). The first form of violence, namely passive structural violence in this context, refers to structural violence where certain individuals or groups experience inequality in access to resources, opportunities and their basic rights without any physical or direct action involved. The novel describes how Leba Ali's connections were at the police station. He could easily bribe the police so that he would not be arrested even though he had been proven to have kidnapped and raped Magi Diela. Magi did not get justice even though he was a victim.

A form of repressive type of structural violence is any treatment carried out by depriving a person of their fundamental rights/basic rights, such as freedom of opinion, social equality, gender, protection of personal and social property rights, citizenship and political rights. Repressive violence is seen in the novel. The marriage custom has robbed Magi Diela of her right to live happily with the man she loves. Magi Diela was not given the opportunity to express her feelings regarding the agreement between Leba Ali and Ama Bobo.

Injustice/inequality is also depicted in the novel, namely the injustice experienced by Magi Diela. The tradition of abducted marriages in West Sumba has shackled Magi Diela. With the help of 5 young men, Leba Ali kidnapped Magi Diela while on her way to Hupu Mada village. At that time, Magi Diela was tasked with providing agricultural counseling to farmer groups in West Sumba, specifically Hupu Mada Village. Magi Diela was harassed by the five young men. There is no customary discussion that does not agree on the number of belis. No one had ever fallen in love with her so much that they were so hurt that they felt compelled to take her by force to be their wife. Magi Diela was not given the opportunity to speak out, reject all forms of injustice and oppression that she experienced.

In general, there are three forms of violence in the novel "Perempuan yang Menangis kepada Bulan Hitam" by Dian Purnomo, namely direct violence, structural violence and cultural violence. This is in line with the results of Sunarto's (2021) research which states that the forms of violence in novels show that the violence contained in novels is divided into three, namely direct violence, structural violence and cultural violence. Direct violence in this research is further divided into three, namely (1) direct violence against the main character, (2) direct violence against the people of Aceh, and (3) direct violence against women. In structural violence, the government was the driving force behind the riots in Aceh. The government through its policies has depleted nature in Aceh. The people of Aceh who are fighting to reclaim it are also being oppressed by government troops. Cultural violence in this research is also further divided into three, namely (1) the Free Aceh Movement, (2) Islamic ideology, and (3) violence against women.

Furthermore, in research conducted by Setiawati (2022: 1-231) data was also obtained that the dominant violence was direct violence. In the results of this research, two types of direct violence were obtained, each consisting of several forms of violence, the two types of violence, namely direct non-physical violence and direct physical violence. Galtung (1996: 31) believes that direct non-physical violence is a form of violence that injures a person psychologically or internally, there is no direct injury to the naked eye but psychologically there is a deep injury.

The results of the data analysis have explored the many forms of violence in the novel "Perempuan yang Menangis kepada Bulan Hitam" by Dian Purnomo, which can then be used as a source of reading and information regarding the stories of Sumbanese women who are shackled by the tradition of captured or kidnapped marriages. By the author, the characters and storyline are arranged very nicely and present the stories and narratives of Sumbanese women. Magi Diela's inner conflict, Magi Diela's conflict with Leba Ali, Magi Diela's conflict with Ama Bobo, as her father, Magi Diela's conflict with the local community are told in an extraordinary story style. The tragic story of Magi Diela and Magi Diela's form of resistance to Sumbanese customs is narrated very well by Dian Purnomo. The author is able to bring space to the reader's imagination as if he were feeling all the forms of suffering and oppression experienced by Magi Diela.

5. CONCLUSION

There are three forms of violence in the novel "Perempuan yang Menangis kepada Bulan Hitam" by Dian Purnomo, including direct violence, structural violence and cultural violence. Forms of direct violence (direct violence) dominate, namely 15 forms from 59 data, including threatening (12 data), insulting (8 data), accusing (1 data), ridiculing (2 data), harassing (3 data), forcing (2), selfish (6 data), strangling (3 data), crushing (3 data), dragging (2 data), slapping (3 data), pulling hair (2 data), biting (2 data), punching (4 data), and rape (6 data); There are 2 forms of structural violence, namely passive violence (3 data) and repressive violence (9 data); and forms of cultural violence consist of 4 forms, including arranged marriages (3 data), women in education (2 data), village community trust (3 data), and exogamy (3 data).
