Marxist Philosophy

Marxist philosophy is a collective term for dialectical materialism and historical materialism. Marx and Engels believe that the unity of the world lies in its materiality, and that matter is the basis for all changes in the world. Movement is the form of existence of matter, the movement of matter is absolute, and the rest is relative. Substance is not a product of the spirit. Spirit is the highest form of material in motion. Social existence determines people's consciousness, and people can recognize and correctly use objective laws. The laws of dialectics are drawn from the history of the natural world and human society, and can essentially be attributed to the following three laws: the law of transformation from quantity to quality and quality to quantity; the law of oppositional mutual penetration; negation of negation law. Dialectics is the science of the most universal laws of all sports. The root cause of the movement is contradiction. Conflicting parties only exist in their interdependence and mutual connection. To understand the laws of movement in the material world, people must go through practice. People should prove the truth of their thinking in practice. The ability of people to understand is limitless, and the knowledge of individual people is limited. This contradiction must be resolved in endless, continuous generations.

Historical materialism holds that the production labor of material life materials is the basis for the existence and development of human society. Laborers and means of production are always factors of production, and the combination of the two constitutes productivity. When people develop productive forces, they also develop a certain degree of interrelationship, that is, production relations. The total production relations form a social relationship. The nature of production relations and social relations changes with changes in productivity. People must first eat, drink, live, and wear before they can engage in politics, science, art, and so on. Therefore, the production of material information in each historical era and the resulting social structure are the basis of politics and thought in this era. Since the dissolution of the original commune system, all history has been the history of class struggle. Historical activities are the cause of the masses. People create their own history, but they are created on the basis of real relationships. Individuals have a role in history. Every era needs and can create great people of their own time.

The role of Marxist theoretical education in the ideological and political education of college students is one of the hot topics discussed by the ideological and theoretical circles and the education community. The role of Marxist theoretical education in the ideological and political education of college students lies in the fact that it not only provides a scientific theoretical foundation for the establishment of a correct world outlook, outlook on life, and values for college students, but also improves the ability of college students to analyze and solve problems and cultivate their philosophy. Thinking, establishing correct ideals and convictions and political positions, and nurturing their patriotic sentiments all play an important role. For this reason, the researchers conducted extensive research and discussion.

The Role of Cultivating College Students' Philosophical Thinking and Establishing a Scientific Worldview and Methodology

Marxist materialism and dialectics provide people with a scientific way of thinking about the nature, human society, and people themselves. This principle is the starting point for people to engage in all activities. It requires people to insist on starting from reality, seeking truth from facts, and grasping the nature and the law of change according to the state of affairs. Providing a methodology for understanding the world and transforming the world is an important function of Marxist philosophy. Methodology is the application, development, and realization of a world outlook. The current unhealthy mentality, mentality, and values in college students are aside from social unhealthy thoughts and phenomena. Apart from its influence, the main reason is that it has not mastered the scientific methods of observation, analysis, and understanding of society.

The Role for Undergraduates in Establishing Correct Outlooks on Life, Values and Establishing Sublime Value of Life

The important thinking of the "three represents" is a concentrated expression of contemporary Marxist values and is a socially dominant value in the reconstruction of contemporary university students' values system. This is because the important thinking of the "three represents" reflects the unity of collectives and individuals, material and spiritual life, instrumental values, and purposeful values. Only by mastering a scientific world outlook, outlook on life, and values can we make college students make a correct assessment of the current international and domestic political situation, and then choose the correct position, viewpoints, and methods to take corrective action. Only when it comes to the future of the country and the nation the major political issues of fate and destiny have the correct understanding and attitude, and they can adopt the right attitude and position toward the people and their interests.

The Role for College Students in Establishing Correct Ideals and Beliefs

Only when we have a complete and accurate understanding of Marxism can we have the desire and pursuit of it, can we firmly believe in their scientific nature, and use Marxism's fighting spirit and critical spirit to counter all kinds of wrong thoughts, and then we can establish communism and Chinese characteristics society. The lofty ideals and beliefs of the doctrine. Marxist theoretical education can enable students to deeply understand the justice, inevitability, and arduousness of communism and socialism, understand the loftiness and beauty of communism and socialism, and guide college students to unify their personal values and social values and make great ideals. Combine with the common ideals to establish the common ideals and beliefs of socialism with Chinese characteristics and devote themselves to the great cause of socialism with Chinese characteristics.

Conclusion

Marxist theory and the "three outlooks" education are the guiding ideology of ideological and political education in colleges. It sets a scientific world outlook, outlook on life and values for university students, improves their ability to analyze and solve problems, and establishes a correct political position, which plays an important role in establishing correctness of policy, ideals and beliefs, nurturing their patriotic feelings, elevating their moral realm, promoting their overall quality and all-round development of individuals .
